

Foo Dog Netsuke

Date
19th century

Primary Maker
Unknown artist, Japanese

Medium
Ceramic

Description
The word netsuke is formed using the symbol ne () meaning “root” and tsuke () meaning “attach.” The first netsuke were created in late sixteenth-century Japan as simple button fasteners for pouches and other containers that were hung on the sash (obi) of a kimono. As time progressed, the carving of these small figures became increasingly intricate as netsuke transformed from purely functional objects into fashionable indicators of status. Netsuke commonly depict imagery from nature, myth, and Japanese history. Beginning in the late nineteenth century, netsuke also became a popular type of collectible in the West. Netsuke ceramic foo dog with traces of turquoise glaze. There are two holes on the underside for stringing.

Dimensions
Overall: 1 1/4 × 2 × 1 in. (3.2 × 5.1 × 2.5 cm)